The message sent by Chairman of the State Administration Council Prime Minister of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar Senior General Min Aung Hlaing to the ceremony to mark World Teachers' Day

I praise and honour the attributes of teachers by paying respects, humbling themselves, acknowledging the gratitude of others and paying back the debt of gratitude to others in line with the auspiciousness "Gavaroca, Nivatoca, Katannuta, Katavedi" on the occasion of the World Teachers' Day.

The teacher is one of the infinity benefactors to whom Myanmar Buddhists pay homage. As such, those teachers are deserved to be paid homage on a daily basis dedicated to their infinity attributes. Hence, ceremonies to pay respect to teachers take place across the nation — in schools and universities at an opportune time.

The World Teachers' Day has been held since 1994 due to recommendations on standards of teachers in 1966 given by UNESCO and the International Labour Organization. 5 October every year is set as the World Teachers' Day to hold the ceremony, and the Ministry of Education takes responsibilities for observing the day on the national level in Myanmar as of 2002.

In line with the theme "The Transformation of Education Begins with Teachers", it highlights the important role of teachers in the reform process of the education sector and indicates the requirements to consider the future life of teachers by fulfilling their needs so as to fully utilize talent and academic professions of teachers.

Teachers are compassionate persons to teach pupils for having skill and politeness, enlightenment and capability. As they teach pupils to have good moral and morality, they can be dubbed teacher-cum-mind trainers. Especially, they redirect the pupils from derailed path to the right track. Hence, Manlei Sayadaw composed the nature of teachers as "the teachers give advice to pupils for latter's interests with compassion and empathy not keep the sins of pupils in their minds".

It can be said that teachers never mean pupils any harm and nurture them to have greater lives. Teachers teach knowledge, technology, good practices, and dos and don'ts as manuals for their pupils in their future journeys.

Teachers accept themselves as beginning learners who learn any subjects at first to have skills. They open eyes and ears to self-learning with the use of the library, internet and IT technologies, always making efforts to teach modern subjects to pupils.

They give teaching and training to pupils to prefer education. The teachers today are learning the languages which contribute to their subjects. In order to effectively teach their pupils, teachers always revise lessons, teaching methods, curriculums and teaching aid. If so, ordinary teaching can be upgraded to academic measures based on technology.

It is necessary to train and teach the students who can be dubbed as today's youths will be adults in the future to have knowledge, courage and moral capacities in the future so as to overcome challenges in their lifetime.

As technology and knowledge can uplift family life and social life, a country, a state or a society can be improved through education. Hence, only when qualified teachers lead such a process will they shape the beautiful and pleasant world.

In conclusion, I'd like to deeply urge the teachers to strive to contribute to the modernization of Myanmar education by meeting the international standards and implementing the democratic system based on federalism through education so as to guide pupils to be free from dangers in line with the five ethics of teachers — teaching skills, giving advice, not leaving any topics, preventing danger and sending them to suitable institutions—, teach new generation youths to be able to bravely overcome global challenges, lead them to have the correct knowledge, works and practices on the occasion of the significant World Teachers' Day.

Myanmar highlights points concealed by human rights mechanisms against Myanmar

THE United Nations Human Rights Council has been conducting its 51st Regular Session in Geneva since 12 September 2022, in which it included unsupportive country-specific events against Myanmar. To continue the work of selectively targeting Myanmar, the EU and the OIC countries created a plethora of so-called Interactive Dialogues with the Independent Investigative Mechanism for Myanmar (IIMM) on 12 September 2022, with the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Myanmar on 21 and 22 September 2022 and with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on 22 September 2022 as well as with the Acting High Commissioner for Human Rights on 26 September 2022.

The Human Rights Council established the IIMM outside of its mandate which is not a prosecutorial body with no authority to establish such mechanism. The mechanism has been further allowed to operate for unlimited time spending 15 million USD every year. While there is no clear oversight tool to scrutinize the so-called three million pieces of information which are indeed never open for verification, its funding as IIMM now openly received the additional remuneration from the US government though such acceptance is strictly prohibited for the United Nations Special Procedure mandate holders as well as its staffing since selection and appointment of IIMM staff never go to the public. Such ambiguity of the IIMM is in fact carefully crafted to reach desired conclusions of its co-sponsors and Myanmar does not recognize the IIMM since its establishment. Myanmar reaffirms its position on non-recognition of the mechanism.

The Special Rapporteur has never failed to exploit his mandate but alleged the Government to have committed "such-and-such international crimes" by easily referring to unreliable dissident sources and without plausible knowledge of his own. The Special Rapporteur, beyond the prerogative of the United Nations, has been publicly lobbying to recognize the NUG terrorist group in addition to deceiving international community by hiding the acts of the NUG and PDF terrorists who brutally killed at least 3,800 unarmed civilians including 88 children. He turned a blind eye to the recent video footage that was widely spreading online about the merciless slaughter of two women teachers who were blindfolded by the PDF terrorists and asking for sparing their lives. Killing a headmistress and a teacher from Minywa village in Gangaw Township of Magway Region on 18 August 2022 is not an isolated event. Both the parents were shot dead by the PDF terrorists after dropping their eight-year-old daughter off at school on 23 August 2022 in Mandalay. While the Special Rapporteur has considered all fabricated stories, he omitted the facts which contradict to his narratives such as massive killing of over twenty persons committed by the NUG terrorists in Yinmabin Township, Sagaing Region in November 2021. These are a few incidents among 3,800 other cases largely covered up by the United Nations human rights personnel.

Myanmar observed that the report of the OHCHR is another provoking document identical to those of organizations and media outlets which enjoyed various supports from certain western countries to interfere in internal affairs of Myanmar in every aspect. Furthermore, the OHCHR eventually calls for imposing economic sanctions against Myanmar's state-owned enterprises, which is tantamount to deprive the people of Myanmar from their rights to development and such sanctions will have impact on the well-being of the people of Myanmar. No matter how the OHCHR is trying to hide this agenda, it is well known that the economic sanctions become effective only at the cost of the socio-economic life of the general population.

Similarly, the Acting High Commissioner overstated one-sided allegations against the Myanmar Government while the participation of Myanmar was intentionally left out from every Interactive Dialogue. She mentioned skirmishes in certain parts of the country but failed to reveal the heinous crimes committed by the NUG and PDF terrorist groups against innocent civilians with the support of armed organizations active in some ethnic areas. Myanmar wishes to highlight the undeniable fact that large parts of Myanmar in the absence of such armed organizations remain peaceful. Alleging denial of humanitarian access is not rational as 15 UN agencies and 26 INGOs are still functioning in Rakhine State. While Myanmar stands ready to receive the verified displaced persons, it never recognizes the term "Rohingya".

While Myanmar wishes to express its appreciation to the countries which uphold the principles of the Human Rights Council, Myanmar categorically rejects the above-mentioned flawed reports, their presentations and intrusive statements made by certain countries at the 51st Session of the Council.

They also thanked the government for providing encouragement and necessary support.

The Senior General meets the business people of micro, small and medium enterprises-MSMEs in Pyay District on 4 October 2022.

The tourism industry in cultural heritage centres encouraged

Important to produce cooking oil of good quality

Regarding the cultivation and production of crops, the Prime Minister said that, as the government is practising market economy, he encouraged private economy, that, as the government is providing all the necessary assistance, the farmers on their part need to do the cultivation systematically and use quality strains, that it is important to use modern machinery to be able to produce cooking oil of good quality.

Technologies to be provided to extract metal ores for iron production

The Prime Minister continued to say that fuel oil is imported from abroad and the government is trying for consumers to be able to get it at a reasonable price, that the government is making efforts to be able to generate the electricity needed for industries, that projects are being laid down to be able to use electric cars for public transport, the government has given private entrepreneurs the green light to extract minerals and respective ministries will provide necessary technologies to them to be able to extract metal ores for iron production.

Union Ministers U Win Shein, Dr Kan Zaw, U Tin Htut Oo, U Hla Moe, Dr Charlie Than and U Aung Naing Oo explained the implementation of work by respective ministries, relaxation of rules for payment of loans and disbursement of further loans, the necessity for the development of economic enterprises in accord with the economic policies laid down by the government, steps being taken for increased income of rural people and the necessity for rural development by organizing cooperative associations.

Discharging State responsibilities and overcoming difficulties in cooperation with the people

In his speech, the Senior General said MSME plays a key role in the development of the State economy and it is a primary economic driving force for developing countries. MSME industries are built for many percentages in developed and developing countries.

Politics and economy

If the economy does not develop, politics will not be stable. As the downtrend of the economy can cause political problems, efforts are being made to enhance the economy. In the market economic system, businesspersons must have self-reliance whereas the State will adopt coherent policies. State revenues comes from the people and trade as well as that of the non-trade process. These incomes are spent under the budget to develop the State. Only when the local economy improves will the nation develop.

Requirement of production based on agriculture and livestock and qualified human resources

Production is essential for operating businesses. Likewise, production needs raw materials. Myanmar is endowed with raw materials from underground and aboveground natural resources. Agriculture and livestock farming require fertilizers, feedstuffs, fuel, electricity and other inputs. Livestock farms can be utilized to produce many products. Agricultural produce and livestock products can be consumed at home and exported abroad to promote the economy.

As Myanmar's economy is starting to resurge, efforts must be made for increasing production. In doing so, the government will disburse loans to the business people facing difficulties based on various reasons.

Arrangements are being made to open agriculture institutes and livestock breeding institutes at basic education schools in each district for turning out skilful human resources. Hence, business people need to conduct on-job training courses as much as they can.

Only when socioeconomic life of individuals develops will the region and the country have economic development

The Senior General urged them to efficiently utilize land and water for achieving success in agriculture and livestock farming. Double and triple cropping can help them earn increased income. Only when individual socioeconomic life develops will the region and the country have economic development. Production must be done with raw materials from agriculture and livestock farming in Pyay District.

The Senior General cordially greeted MSME businesspersons of Pyay District at the meeting.

The Senior General then viewed round foodstuffs, personal goods, industrial products, Myanmar traditional goods, clothes and traditional medicines displayed at the meeting hall and asked about the market situation for these products.

CBM says banks won't hike interest rates amid excess bank reserves

THE banks will not hike the interest rate and there are excess bank reserves for now, according to a statement (9/2022) of the decisions of the Monetary Policy Committee of the Central Bank of Myanmar (CBM) meeting.

In order to tackle inflation, the committee considered whether it should raise interest rates or not. The economic growth in the 2021-2022 financial year was 2.4 per cent, which is lower than the target of 3.7 per cent.

The committee decided at a meeting (5/2022) held on 30 May 2022 not to raise the interest rates as the country missed economic targets, cash deposits at the banks are declining, bank credit expansion still cannot happen and the currency in circulation of the banking industry just starts off.

For the ease of inflation, the committee made the Minimum Required Reserves (MRR) ratio remain unchanged at 3 per cent after mulling over banking operations.

The committee raised the current account balance (CAB) of the bank institutions at the Central Bank from 2.25 to 2.5 per cent and lowered the bank reserves (cash) from 0.75 to 0.5 per cent.

This way, the cash physically held by the banks will be deposited to the CBM and modifying reserve requirements will reduce the currency in circulation (CIC) and hope to steer the volatile inflation rate, as per the statement.

Additionally, bank reserves are exceeding at present. As the bank credit expansion cannot still happen, the committee decided to set an interest rate on the average excess CAB.

The statement said it will initially create an interest rate corridor for the money market. Furthermore, to steer inflation, the committee also discussed issuing the CBM Bill as a monetary policy instrument.

Regarding issuing CBM Bill, taking everything into account, advantages, procedures, setting face value and interest rate, types of issuing and payment methods were raised at the meeting and the committee determined to make the necessary preparations. — TWA/GNLM

THE price of pure gold rebounded to K2.6 million per tical (0.578 ounce or 0.016 kilogramme) in domestic markets.

The yellow metal price sank below K2.4 million on 1 October, whereas the price edged up to K2.66 million on 4 October.

The mild rebound in gold spot prices in international markets and Kyat weakening against the US dollar are contributing factors to the gold price increase in domestic markets.

The gold price hit over US$1,660 per ounce on 1 October. The gold spot price stands at over $1,700 per ounce at present.

Similarly, the dollar was exchanged at around K2,700 in the unauthorized markets on 1 October. The exchange rate currently ascends to K2,900.

The soaring dollar exchanging at over K4,500 pushed up the pure gold price to a record-high of K3.7 million per tical in late August.

The Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation is, therefore, selling the gold bars and coins in order for the gold price to ease.

Furthermore, the governor of the Central Bank of Myanmar (CBM) and officials of the Monitoring and Steering Committee on the Gold and Currency Market discussed matters regarding the stability of the gold and currency market and supporting plans of the banks for gold bar transactions to be made with banking system on 14 September in Nay Pyi Taw.

Then, on 30 September, seven private banks opened special counters at the designated 48 branches to offer banking services for gold transactions.

According to CBM's directive 43/2021 dated 3 November 2021, lumpsum payments worth more than K20 million for buying or selling assets have to be processed with the banking system.

Seven private banks are providing banking services by opening special counters at their 48 branches in Yangon and Mandalay regions and Mon State (Mawlamyine) to facilitate gold transactions with the banking payment system.

Those banks are Kanbawza Bank (KBZ Bank), Co-operative Bank (CB Bank) PCL, Ayeyawady (AYA) Bank, Myanmar Apex Bank (MAB), UAB Bank, Yoma Bank, Ayeyawady Farmers Development Bank (A Bank). — NN/GNLM

The wholesale reference price of palm oil in the Yangon Region for a week from 3 to 9 October declined by K640 per viss compared to the last week's price. The reference price for that week was set at K4,020 per viss.

Consequently, palm oil rebounded in the markets. The wholesale prices gradually rose from K6,000 on 1 October to K6,700 per viss on 4 October.

Pulses

On 4 October, the prices of various pulses stood at over K1,817,000 per tonne of black gram (Fair Average Quality/RC), K2,1327,000 per tonne of black gram (Special Quality/RC), K1,980,000 per tonne of pigeon pea (red gram) RC and K3,950-K4,100 per viss of chickpea in Yangon markets.— TWA/GNLM

Heartily honour and uplift lives of benefactor teachers

MYANMAR people pay respect to the attributes of teachers who give the teaching on various subjects or share their experiences with them, identifying the teachers as benefactors forever because education and knowledge given by the teachers can be utilized for the whole their lifetime.

Those teachers nurture all the people in Myanmar society without any expectation for ensuring their wealth. Most of those teachers stand for their lives without giving up anything despite facing difficulties and challenges in their lives. Although they are facing hardship for daily consumption due to their salaries which are not enough for their family, they are keen to provide assistance or give food to pupils.

As a nature of Myanmar society, teachers are satisfactory for wealth, booming business and outstanding of their pupils who have completed learning at schools although their attributes of teaching and nurturing are not acknowledged by students. As such, those teachers are deserved to accept respect paid by not only their students but by the people, as one of the invaluable benefactors to society.

> In Myanmar society, the word of teachers is all-inclusive of the persons who give school education, create a chance for anyone to learn techniques behind them and do something aloud to complete the works which acts are designed to let anyone study some knowledge and techniques without actual advice and teachings. Hence, people recognize them as teachers in teaching, seeing and hearing.

World Teachers' Day is held annually on 5 October every year to honour as well as pay respect to the attributes of all teachers across Myanmar and throughout the world. The day honours the teachers regarding their rights and responsibilities, and standard for their initial preparation and further education, recruitment, employment, and teaching and learning conditions.

The theme for World Teachers' Day 2022 is "The transformation of education begins with teachers". Celebrations will address the commitments and calls for action made at the Transforming Education Summit, in September 2022, and analyze the implications they have for teachers and teaching.

It is a day to celebrate how teachers are transforming education but also to reflect on the support they need to fully deploy their talent and vocation, and to rethink the way ahead for the profession globally.

In Myanmar society, the word of teachers is all-inclusive of the persons who give school education, create a chance for anyone to learn techniques behind them and do something aloud to complete the works which acts are designed to let anyone study some knowledge and techniques without actual advice and teachings. Hence, people recognize them as teachers in teaching, seeing and hearing.

Indeed, teachers are a driving force for the nation in taking nation-building measures without hoping for positions, ranks and income for their lives. They all are passing their lives very simply. As such, all people need to heartily honour and uplift their lives. ■

WE HAVE got children who are our own or not. They can be named our future generations. It is natural that older people or adults always lay genuine seeds for their new generations from time to time. In this process, society gets flourished. No one can deny it. However, it is general. In reality, older people or adults especially only teachers can perform this responsibility effectively and successfully. In society, the role of teachers cannot be forgotten. Moreover, to become a better society, teachers are essential and the techniques they will have to utilize to make their students bloom are more essential than any other one.

Teachers today are encouraged to help their learners develop life competencies during each life stage of education from pre-primary to secondary. 21st-century course materials integrate opportunities to work on competencies such as communication, collaboration, creative thinking, critical thinking, social responsibilities, and learning to learn. They offer the teacher a range of activities and ideas to encourage and motivate their learners to develop these competencies.

Among those six main competencies, we can have identified in the Life Competencies Framework is the last one i.e., learning to learn. So, why is it important for our learners to develop learning to learn skills at school and how will such skills equip them for life beyond secondary school education?

Learning to learn is the ability to pursue and persist in learning, to organize one's learning, including effective management of the time and information both individually and in groups.

Learning to learn strategies include any thoughts, behaviours, beliefs, or emotions that facilitate the acquisition, understanding, or later application and transfer of new knowledge and skills in different performance contexts. They range from active rehearsal to help remember word lists, to the use of elaboration and organization to encode, integrate, and later recall or apply knowledge across several content areas. Learning to learn strategies help generate meaning for the new information that is to be learned. Repeating the names of the planets in order, organizing the discoveries of the great explorers by creating timelines and mind maps, and comparing and contrasting the causes of World War I and World War II, are all examples of learning strategies.

They all are designed to help the learner generate meaning and store the new information in memory in a manner that will facilitate integration with related knowledge and increase the probability of later recall and use, particularly in transfer contexts.

A learning strategy is also a plan for orchestrating cognitive resources to help reach a learning goal. Learning to learn strategies have several characteristics in common.

First, they are goal-directed. Learning strategies are used to help meet a standard of performance or to reach a learning goal.

Second, learning strategies are intentionally invoked, which implies at least some level of active selection. The selection of one or more of these strategies is determined by a number of factors, such as a student's prior experience with the strategy, his or her prior experience with similar learning tasks, his or her ability to deal with distractions, and the student's commitment to his or her goals.

Third, cognitive learning strategies are effortful; they require time and often involve using multiple, highly interactive steps. Because of the effort required, a student must be motivated to initiate and maintain strategy use (e.g., see Motivation, Learning, and Instruction). In addition, the student must believe that the strategy will be effective and that he or she can be successful using the strategy.

Finally, cognitive learning strategies are not universally applicable—they are situation-specific. The student's goals, the task requirements, the context, and other factors all interact to help determine which strategy may be best. To be successful in selecting and using a strategy, a student must understand under what circumstances a given strategy is, or is not appropriate.

When developing learning-to-learn competencies in the secondary classroom we are equipping our learners with the practical skills to participate in, take control of, reflect on and evaluate their learning in higher education and the workplace.

Students in higher education are expected to be more independent and less reliant on their tutors and play an active role in directing their learning. Being equipped with a variety of study skills and knowing how to use them effectively is crucial. Examples include the ability to create an effective learning environment without distractions, or being able to manage time effectively to stay focused and meet deadlines.

In higher education, students are fully responsible for organizing the time they spend outside class to work on projects and assignments or to prepare for exams. We know from our understanding of how memory works that the human brain can retain and retrieve information more effectively when we review it systematically.

Therefore, for example, a university student who paces their learning uses mind maps or graphic organizers to make clear, structured notes from their lecture notes or own reading and reviews them periodically during peak concentration levels will improve their learning outcomes far more effectively than a student who opts to spend hours cramming for an exam the night before. This "distributed practice" or spacing out study times into short, regular sessions over a long period will undoubtedly have a positive impact on their learning.

In addition to distributed practice, learners should aim to make the retrieval of information as useful as possible by not only recalling the information but applying it to answer a specific exam question, solve a certain problem or complete a particular task as part of a piece of coursework. Learners need to be able to identify and select relevant information by making connections.

Those students who have been shown how to use graphic organizers and make connections to organize information will be better equipped to identify which information is necessary to complete a task or answer a question and identify which further relevant information they need to source. So, it is not simply a case of regurgitating information but retrieving it in a useful way. Students who were encouraged at school to regularly create and carry out low-stakes quizzes to review course content or explain how to answer certain questions to their peers will be better able to review information effectively.

Higher education students today are expected to know how to reflect on and evaluate their learning to achieve desired learning outcomes. At college or university, they will need to plan schemes of work and keep a record of the progress made. They will also be expected to carry out longer written assignments and projects and may need to work collaboratively with others to produce them.

Students who have had the opportunity to use formative assessment at school will have had invaluable experience in reflecting on their learning and becoming more involved in the learning process. They will be used to reflect on the success of their learning and identify where their learning needs to go next. This training will help them stay focused during projects and assignments at university as they systematically reflect on their progress at various stages of the process, identity what the next steps are, and have a clear idea of how to go about achieving them.

One of the most useful skills they will have developed is how to identify what information is needed and how to source it. Identifying which member of a team is best prepared to contribute certain skills or knowledge or develop certain parts of the project will also improve its overall execution. As autonomous learners, they will also be better equipped to manage the resources available, source reliable information either online or from the library or self-study centre, and use this information appropriately while avoiding plagiarism and respecting copyright.

Curriculum policies increasingly focus on competencies that students are expected to develop during the whole process of learning across specific subjects or disciplines and that they need to succeed in education and for personal development, employment, and inclusion in a knowledge society. A variety of terms are used to indicate these competencies, the most frequent ones being competences or competencies (defined as key, core, general, generic, basic, cross-curricular, or transversal competencies) and skills (defined as key, foundation, core, basic, essential, cross-thematic, cross-curricular or 21st-century skills). Beyond the European Union area, several organizations, partnerships, and consortia have defined and endorsed different core competencies/skills frameworks.

All of these competencies that our students further develop during their time in higher education will also be relevant and necessary in the future workplace. It is clear that building up a wide range of learning to learn skills during our formative years will stand us in very good stead for the years ahead.

Sri Lanka plans to earn US$3 bln through indigenous medicine: official

SRI Lanka plans to earn three billion US dollars in foreign exchange within three years by exporting indigenous medical products and services, State Minister of Indigenous Medicine Sisira Jayakody has said.

"This is one of the main areas where we can earn foreign exchange since a lot of foreigners are interested in the medical system," said the official, quoted by local media on Sunday.

Laws on facilitating export of indigenous medical products have been drafted and would be presented at the parliament shortly, he said.

Legal marijuana, but Uruguayans still prefer black market

Uruguay legally produced 1,200-kilogrammes of marijuana between July 2017 and July 2018, 100 per cent of which was sold to registered users. PHOTO: LARS HAGBERG/AFP/FILE

URUGUAY was a pioneer in the legalization of recreational cannabis use, a move that helped to push many drug traffickers out of the domestic market.

But a bland and insufficient state supply has meant most consumers still prefer the diversity of the black market.

In 2013, Uruguay became the first country in the world to legalize recreational marijuana use — which came into effect four years later — even permitting its sale in pharmacies.

There are three legal ways for registered users to get hold of marijuana: purchasing it at pharmacies, through home growing for personal use, and by belonging to an official cannabis-producing club.

The most sought after legal method is membership of one of the 249 consumer clubs, which offer a greater variety to their 7,166 members than pharmacies do.

But many clubs have long waiting lists to join as they are limited by law to between 15 and 45 members.

Pulla, the treasurer and technical manager of a cannabis club in Montevideo — who uses a nickname to avoid falling foul of the ban on promoting cannabis use — explained that the waiting list "is an indicator that demand is not satisfied".

"Many more people want to access the legal market who still cannot," he said.

There are just over 14,000 registered home growers and another 49,600 people are registered to purchase marijuana at one of the country's 28 approved pharmacies at around $10 for five grammes — below the black market rate.

According to a study by the local IRCCA institute that regulates cannabis, only 27 per cent of Uruguayan consumers buy their drugs through approved channels, a figure that reaches 39 per cent when taking into account sharing with friends.— AFP

UN agency warns of global recession induced by monetary policy in advanced economies

MONETARY policy moves in advanced economies risk pushing the world towards global recession and prolonged stagnation, inflicting worse damage than the 2008 financial crisis and the COVID-19 shock, the UN Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) said on Monday.

Rapid interest rate increases and fiscal tightening in advanced economies, combined with the crises resulting from the COVID-19 pandemic and the Ukraine conflict, have already turned a global slowdown into a downturn with the desired soft landing looking unlikely, said a UNCTAD report titled "Trade and Development Report 2022".

In a decade of ultra-low interest rates, central banks consistently fell short of inflation targets and failed to generate healthier economic growth, the report said, adding that any belief that they can bring down prices by relying on higher interest rates without generating a recession is an imprudent gamble.

At a time of falling real wages, financial turbulence and insufficient multilateral support and coordination, excessive monetary tightening could usher in a period of stagnation and economic instability, it said.

UNCTAD expects the world economy to grow 2.5 per cent in 2022, and the growth in 2023 is expected to decelerate further to 2.2 per cent.

The synchronized slowdown is hitting all regions but is ringing alarm bells for developing countries, where the average growth rate is projected to drop below three per cent, further squeezing public and private finances and damaging employment prospects, the report said.—AFP

Italian economy expected to contract for three consecutive quarters: Treasury

THE Italian economy contracted in the third quarter of this year, the Treasury said Monday, with more negative growth forecast into next year.

This means the country could fall into recession just as the next government is launching its economic programme.

Italy's new parliament, elected in the 25 Sept general election, will sit for the first time on 13 Oct. This will set the stage for a new government most likely dominated by the right-wing party Brothers of Italy, led by Giorgia Meloni.

Forecasts from the Italian Treasury show an economic contraction in the quarter ending 30 Sept and at least two more quarters of negative growth. A recession is defined as two consecutive quarters of negative growth.— Xinhua

EU commissioners urge European answer to energy price shock

TWO key members of the EU's executive Monday criticized Germany over its 200-billion-euro plan to address the current energy shock and called for a joint European response.

In a highly unusual move, representatives from France and Italy to the European Commission said Berlin's plan to help German consumers and businesses "raised questions" of fairness.

There are "member states that do not have the same budgetary leeway as Germany" and may not be able to support their economy equally, wrote commissioners Thierry Breton and Paolo Gentiloni in the French newspaper Les Echos and other European publications.—AFP

Policy incentives set to sustain China's NEV boom

CHINA has renewed its policy support for the new-energy vehicle (NEV) sector, a move that experts believe will further fuel an industry that is already in the fast lane.

Days ahead of the National Day holiday, usually seen as a peak shopping season, China announced that the purchase tax exemption for NEVs will be extended to the end of 2023. This marks the third extension since the country first implemented the policy in 2014.

Based on the selling prices of mainstream new-energy vehicles in the market, experts estimate that the policy will help car buyers save about 10,000 yuan (about 1,408 US dollars), while policymakers expect it to result in 100 billion yuan of taxes waived nationwide. Tax exemption has been proven an effective tool in spurring consumption. In the first seven months of the year, the policy has cut around 40.68 billion yuan in taxes, up 108.5 per cent from the previous year, according to the State Administration of Taxation.

Experts believe that such a favourable policy will further unleash market demand for NEVs, a sector that has registered rapid expansion in recent years.In the first eight months of this year, a total of 3.86 million NEVs were sold in China, surging about 110 per cent year on year, according to the China Association of Automobile Manufacturers (CAAM).—AFP

Japan PM asks firms to match pay hikes to inflation

JAPANESE Prime Minister Fumio Kishida on Tuesday asked companies to aim for pay hikes that keep pace with accelerating inflation in wage negotiations next spring, as he seeks to achieve both economic growth and redistribution amid the rising cost of living.

Smoothing the way for wage growth, the government will expand subsidies for small and midsize firms on condition that they raise pay, according to a government plan.

It will also prod bigger companies to accept higher prices set by subcontractors by making public the names of those that refuse to do so repeatedly or without providing justification.

"I hope negotiations will take place between management and labour unions to realize pay hikes that can make up for inflation," Kishida told a government panel meeting on creating a "new form of capitalism." The request was included in a list of priority items that will go into a new economic package to be compiled later this month. Kishida has already instructed officials to focus on three areas -- coping with inflation and a weak yen, spurring wage growth, and achieving growth through investment and reform.—Kyodo

Twitter Blue subscribers getting edit feature

TWITTER on Monday said a feature to edit tweets is being rolled out to those subscribing to its Blue service in Australia, Canada and New Zealand.

The long-awaited editing tool test "went well," so it is being made more widely available, the San Francisco based tech firm said in a tweet, adding that it is "coming soon" to the United States.

"Edit Tweet is a feature that lets people make changes to their Tweet after it's been published," the company said on its blog. "Think of it as a short period of time to do things like fix typos, add missed tags, and more."

The tool will let users edit a tweet up to five times within 30 minutes of initially posting, Twitter said.

An icon looking like a slanted pen or pencil will indicate that a tweet has been edited, and a "version history" will be available to show what was changed, Twitter said.

Twitter Blue subscriptions are priced at $5 monthly, according to the company's website.

Tesla Chief Executive Elon Musk, who is locked in a lawsuit with Twitter over his effort to break his $44 billion deal to buy the global social media site, had backed an edit button shortly before the company said in April it was studying the change.—AFP

Paris waves goodbye to cardboard Metro tickets

The metro ticket has had a colourful career.
PHOTO: AFP

THE Paris Metro is phasing out cardboard tickets after 120 years, taking the capital's urban transit into a contactless future but leaving behind nostalgic fans who will miss the humble rectangular cards.

Beyond their intended use as a transport token, the tickets with their trademark magnetic strip have inspired artists, filmmakers and singers, served as emergency notepads and, most of all, bookmarks.

"As the metro ticket disappears, so does a part of our lives," said Gregoire Thonnat, a collector and author of a book on the history of the metro ticket. "The metro ticket is part of how we picture Paris."

Ile-de-France Mobilites, which operates the metro's ticketing system, had wanted the pack of 10 tickets known as "carnets" to be gone by the first quarter of this year.

But then the Covid-19 pandemic erupted, and Russia's war in Ukraine, and with it a global shortage of microchips needed to make the smartcards to replace the tickets — whose sales still total 550 million per year, more than 50 tonnes of paper.

"We were in a hurry, but the chip crisis slowed us down," Laurent Probst, director-general at Ile-de-France Mobilites told AFP.

The operator has started cutting the number of metro stations that still sell carnets to nudge clients towards plastic cards, and many turnstiles can no longer read cardboard tickets.

'Change their habits'

As a result, the share of card tickets used on urban trips has dropped from more than two-thirds a year ago to well under half now. "Our customers are beginning to change their habits," Probst said.— AFP

RUSSIA-UKRAINE CONFLICT

Russian parliament backs Putin's annexation bill

RUSSIAN lawmakers on Monday voted unanimously in favour of legislation to annex four regions of Ukraine, rubber stamping a move that escalates the conflict and was already approved by Russian President Vladimir Putin.

Members of the Kremlin-loyal lower house of parliament, the State Duma, all voted to incorporate Donetsk, Lugansk, Kherson and Zaporizhzhia with no abstentions or votes against the annexation, its website showed.

Putin last Friday presided over a grand ceremony at the Kremlin during which he signed agreements with the Moscow-installed leaders of the four regions to become subjects of the Russian Federation.

North Korea defends Russian annexation of Ukraine land

NORTH Korea voiced support Tuesday for Russia's annexation of areas of Ukraine that its troops occupy, and accused the US and its allies of acting like a gangster by leading a drive at the UN against Moscow's behaviour.

Last week, Russian President Vladimir Putin announced that Moscow had annexed four areas of Ukraine which held Kremlin-organized referendums on land seized by Russia's military.

The United States and other Western countries have called those referendums shams carried out at gunpoint and vowed never to recognize the annexation.

But North Korean Foreign Minister Jo Chol Su defended those referendums on joining Russia as perfectly legitimate and "held in keeping with the UN Charter laying down the principles of the equality of peoples", the state-run KCNA news agency said. North Korea is an ally of Russia.—AFP

Elon Musk in row with Zelensky over Russia 'peace plan'

US billionaire Elon Musk was embroiled in a social media spat with Ukrainian officials including President Volodymyr Zelensky on Monday over his ideas on ending Russia's invasion.

Musk sparked the controversy on Twitter by proposing a peace deal involving re-running under UN supervision annexation referendums in Moscow-occupied Ukrainian regions, acknowledging Russian sovereignty over the Crimean peninsula and giving Ukraine a neutral status.

The Tesla and SpaceX founder created a poll to let his more than 107 million followers vote on the idea.

Zelensky responded with a Twitter poll of his own, asking: "Which @elonmusk do you like more?" with the options "One who supports Ukraine" and "One who supports Russia".

Kyiv's ambassador to Germany Andriy Melnyk replied bluntly: "My very diplomatic response (to Musk) is to get lost." Ukrainian presidential aide Mykhaylo Podolyak suggested a "better peace plan" under which Ukraine took back its territories including Crimea, Russia was demilitarized and denuclearized and "war criminals" faced an international tribunal.—AFP

Bestseller or dark horse for 2022 Nobel Literature Prize?

THE Swedish Academy will on Thursday announce the 2022 winner of the often-criticized Nobel Literature Prize, with the award committee known for its penchant for spotlighting lesser-known writers over bestselling authors.

In the past two years, the 18-member Academy has bestowed the prestigious prize on US poet Louise Gluck and Tanzanian author Abdulrazak Gurnah, two writers whose work had not been widely translated and was not known to the broad public — or even some publishers.

"After last year, I think it's maybe even a bit harder to guess" who could win this year, admitted Lina Kalmteg, literary critic for public broadcaster Swedish Radio, recalling the "total surprise" in the studio when Gurnah's name was read out last year.— AFP

32 children died in Indonesia stadium disaster

AT least 32 children died in Indonesia's stadium disaster, an official said Monday, as the government ordered police to identify the "perpetrators" of one of the deadliest disasters in football history.

The tragedy on Saturday night in the city of Malang saw a total of 125 people killed and 323 others injured after officers fired tear gas in a packed stadium to quell a pitch invasion, triggering a stampede.

Dozens of children caught in the chaos lost their lives, an official at the women's empowerment and child protection ministry told AFP on Monday.

"From the latest data we received, out of 125 people who died in the accident, 32 of them were children, with the youngest being a toddler age three or four," said Nahar, who like many Indonesians only goes by one name.

As anger mounted against police, Indonesia's chief security minister Mahfud MD announced that a task force had been formed for an investigation.—AFP

N Korean missile flies over Japan for 1st time in 5 years

NORTH Korea on Tuesday fired a ballistic missile over northeast Japan, the first it has sent across the Japanese archipelago in nearly five years, just days after launching missiles towards the Sea of Japan despite an international outcry.

Japan's Defence Minister Yasukazu Hamada told reporters that the missile flew 4,600 kilometres, the longest distance ever for an intermediate-range or longer one fired by North Korea, reaching an altitude of 1,000 km.

White House National Security Council spokeswoman Adrienne Watson said in a statement that according to a US assessment North Korea launched a "long-range" missile.

Hamada said the missile flew over Japan for around one minute and landed outside the country's exclusive economic zone some 3,200 km east of the nation in the Pacific Ocean, adding there were no reports of damage to aircraft or ships.

The missile could have been a Hwasong-12 intermediate-range ballistic missile, which Pyongyang has fired four times in the past, Hamada said.

It is the seventh time North Korea has launched a missile over Japan. The last occasion was in September 2017.

Trump sues CNN for defamation, may act against 6 January panel

IN a lawsuit filed in a US District Court in Florida, Trump accused CNN of waging a campaign of "libel and slander" against him because it "fears" he will run for president again in 2024.

"CNN has sought to use its massive influence — purportedly as a 'trusted' news source — to defame the plaintiff in the minds of its viewers and readers for the purpose of defeating him politically," Trump's lawyers said in the 29-page complaint. In a follow-up statement laced with outrage, Trump said Monday that "in the coming weeks and months we will also be filing lawsuits against a large number of other Fake News Media Companies for their lies, defamation, and wrongdoing," notably regarding coverage of the 2020 election.

The 76-year-old Republican also said his team "may bring appropriate action against" the congressional committee currently investigating the 6 January 2021 attack on the US Capitol by his supporters, saying the panel refused to probe "the massive Presidential Election Fraud" which he insists occurred.

Trump, who requested a jury trial, had a caustic relationship with CNN and other major news outlets like The New York Times during his term, branding them "fake news" and repeatedly raging against them on social media.

The former president, who has hinted repeatedly at another White House run, accused CNN in the lawsuit of involvement in a "concerted effort to tilt the political balance to the Left".

He said CNN has tried to "taint" him with a "series of ever-more scandalous, false, and defamatory labels of 'racist', 'Russian lackey', 'insurrectionist', and ultimately 'Hitler'".—AFP

Brazil heads for runoff vote with Bolsonaro buoyant

BRAZIL entered the final stretch of a deeply polarized presidential race Monday after an inconclusive first voting round put far-right incumbent Jair Bolsonaro in an unexpectedly strong position.

Bolsonaro, 67, garnered 43 per cent of Sunday's first-round votes compared to 48 per cent for leftist frontrunner Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva — a five-point difference that polls had predicted would be a much larger gap of 14 points. Ex-president Lula, 76, had appeared to be within arm's reach of taking the election in the first round with more than 50 per cent of the vote — but the race now heads to a 30 October runoff. Not only Bolsonaro surpassed expectations: many allies of his "God, country and family" brand of conservative politics also performed better than poll predictions in congressional and gubernatorial races.—AFP

Far-right Trump backers on trial for Capitol riot 'sedition'

THE landmark sedition trial of five members of the far-right Oath Keepers opened Monday with prosecutors telling a jury the group mounted an "armed rebellion" at the US Capitol last year in a bid to keep Donald Trump in power.

Justice Department attorney Jeffrey Nestler said that Stewart Rhodes, the eyepatch-wearing former soldier and Yale law school graduate, knew exactly what he was doing when he led the militia's followers towards the Capitol on 6 January 2021.

Showing videos of the violent assault by dozens of group members dressed in military-style combat gear, Nestler said Rhodes directed them "like a general on the battlefield" as they sought to prevent 2020 election winner Joe Biden from being certified as the next president.—AFP

At least 15 dead in new Ecuador prison riot

AT least 15 prisoners died Monday in the latest unrest inside Ecuador's prison system, officials in the South American country reported. The agency that manages Ecuador's prisons, SNAI, gave the death toll in a statement which also said 21 people were injured in the clashes between inmates.

It had earlier announced that tactical units conducted operations to regain control of the facility, located in the Ecuadoran city of Latacunga. The prison houses about 4,300 prisoners and is one of the largest in the country.Violence in Ecuador's prisons, where drug gangs vie for power, is often carried out with knives and sometimes involves beheadings. Saudi to host Asian Winter Games in NEOM megacity

SAUDI Arabia was chosen on Tuesday to host the 2029 Asian Winter Games at a $500 billion futuristic megacity in the desert that planners say will feature a year-round winter sports complex.

"The deserts and mountains of Saudi Arabia will soon be a playground for winter sports," the Olympic Council of Asia (OCA) said in a statement on the decision made during its general assembly meeting in Phnom Penh.

The Saudi bid was "unanimously approved", the statement said, noting that the megacity known as NEOM will be the first West Asian city to host the event.

First announced in 2017, NEOM has consistently raised eyebrows for proposed flourishes like flying taxis and robot maids, even as architects and economists have questioned its feasibility.

In July, Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman unveiled plans for a project within NEOM known as The Line, two parallel mirror-encased skyscrapers extending over 170 kilometres of mountain and desert terrain.

The Asian Winter Games are slated to take place in Trojena, an area of NEOM "where winter temperatures drop below zero celsius and year-round temperatures are generally 10 degrees cooler than the rest of the region", according to the project's website.

Set to be completed in 2026, Trojena will include year-round skiing, a manmade freshwater lake, chalets, mansions and ultra-luxury hotels, the website says.

The Asian Winter Games include competitions for skiing, snowboarding, ice hockey and figure skating — 47 events in all, 28 on snow and 10 on ice, the OCA said.

India bans Olympic javelin thrower until 2025 for doping

INDIAN anti-doping authorities have suspended Tokyo Olympic javelin thrower Shivpal Singh for four years after he tested positive for a banned drug. Shivpal, India's second best javelin athlete after Olympic gold medallist Neeraj Chopra, was tested out of competition in September last year.

Shivpal, who finished 27th in javelin qualifying at last summer's pandemic-delayed Games, tested positive for methandienone, a performance-enhancing steroid.

The 27-year-old's ban by India's anti-doping disciplinary panel comes into effect from his provisional suspension in October last year. It ends in October 2025, the panel said.—AFP
