Residents Urged to Prioritize Public Safety Amid Armed Terrorist Threats

ARMED terrorists have been launching attacks by using residential homes and administrative buildings in towns and villages as cover, where they have forcibly settled. They aim to shield themselves from Tatmadaw counterattacks while also persuading temporarily displaced persons to return to their native areas and recruiting new members. That enables terrorists to use civilians as human shields. Tatmadaw is committed to safeguarding the sovereignty of the State and will respond to these threats based on intelligence and prevailing conditions. Therefore, residents in areas where terrorists have taken control must prioritize their safety and protect themselves from being exploited by these groups.

Offer to resolve political issues in political means

1. Tatmadaw assumed the State power in accord with the Constitution (2008) of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar only because attempts were made to grasp the State power in improper ways with ignorance over the endeavours of Tatmadaw to solve the political problems through various political means in order to peacefully end the political issues triggered by voting fraud in the multiparty democratic general election held in 2020.
2. Tatmadaw formed the State Administration Council with an equal number of military and civilian participants and adopted its roadmap and objectives. The State Administration Council is steadfastly implementing the fifth point of the five-point roadmap, as its ultimate mission is to hold a free and fair multiparty democratic general election and to hand over the State power to the elected government. However, the State lost a large number of human resources, infrastructures, lives and property of the people due to the fact that some individuals and organizations chose to resort to armed terrorism and armed struggle line without solving political problems through political ways. Moreover, their terror acts have posed obstacles to the peace, stability and development of the State.
3. Currently, the census is scheduled to take place on 1 October to ensure the accuracy of voter lists for the upcoming multiparty democratic general election. Now is the time to make concerted preparations for this election. Considering the losses of the State due to the armed struggle line and terrorism, ethnic armed organizations and PDF terrorists fighting against the State are invited to contact the State to resolve the political issues through party politics or electoral processes in order to be able to join hands with the people to emphasize durable peace and development by discarding the armed terrorist way.

Sesame trade bustles after harvest time

DESPITE a drop in monsoon sesame output, sesame seed prices rise due to growing domestic consumption and solid foreign demand. Brisk sales of sesame reap a handsome profit for growers after harvest time, according to a news report by Magway's Consumer Affairs Department.

Seasonal crops, including rice, sesame, various pulses and kitchen crops, are cultivated in Pantawpyin village-tract, Minhla Township, Magway Region. Sesame seeds were grown in May and harvested in August.

Sesame seeds are sent to Mandalay and Yangon cities from depots in Minhla Township. They are also exported to China and Singapore through the Yangon market. Furthermore, there is a steady demand from domestic oil millers and sesame-based food industries such as sesame jam and roasted sesame businesses.

Cultivating white sesame costs K300,000 per acre, including seeds, agricultural inputs, and labourers' wages. The output is estimated at 10-13 baskets per acre depending on land condition, said a grower from Pantawpyin village-tract.

Myanmar's rice stock at 4M tonnes despite flood damage to 5,000 acres

Export rice bags seen being loaded onto the vessel at Yangon Port.

ALTHOUGH the flood devastated about 5,000 acres of rice fields, Myanmar's rice stock inventory is estimated at four million tonnes. Consequently, it will not affect exports, said President U Ye Min Aung of the Myanmar Rice Federation.

Typhoon Yagi's impact caused flooding in some regions and severe damage to nearly 5,000 acres of paddy fields, rice mills and storage facilities.

"The paddy fields were damaged. The flood-inflicted acres reached 5,000. It will not have a significant impact on Myanmar's rice production, inventory, and exports. There is self-sufficiency of rice with an inventory of four million tonnes remaining. Myanmar's rice supply chain has to deal with only less damage. Floods battered 3,000 acres in Nay Pyi Taw and some crop acres in eastern Bago Region, Shan State and Kayah State," MRF President U Ye Min Aung said.

More than 100,000 acres of agricultural land were submerged during severe flooding in 20 towns in Myanmar. Some growers started to replant crops, including rice paddy, in flood-stricken areas.

MRF has a plan to contribute rice seeds and fertilizer for 5,000 affected acres. There are about 15 million acres of monsoon paddy, with an estimated paddy production of 1.088 billion baskets per year. — ASH/KK

Create an online education system for learners

ONLINE education aims to provide learning opportunities for individuals facing challenges such as financial difficulties, regional restrictions, political barriers, and affordability issues. Additionally, it enables those who wish to continue learning during emergencies to access education continuously.

The international community has been utilizing online education systems for many years. Notably, the University of Toronto in Canada launched its first-ever online classes in 1984. Today, many of the world's top universities and institutions offer online teaching. Additionally, some universities provide a blend of in-person and online learning for various subjects. Since 2000, the online education market has seen rapid growth, now accounting for up to 90 per cent of the education sector, making it a significant and expanding market.

The internet has quickly transformed the education landscape in technologically advanced parts of the world. Its advancement helps minimize disruptions and barriers to learning. As a result, the traditional idea of classrooms being the sole centre for education has been overshadowed by Internet technology. Today, anyone with a computer and internet access can quickly learn various subjects and technologies.

In fact, the online learning system has gained praise from learners as it allows them to access education from anywhere. It enables individuals to acquire knowledge through information technology while saving both time and money. This approach helps learners deepen their understanding of relevant subjects, and they have chances to search for opportunities to apply their knowledge in relevant sectors. Additionally, online learning encourages learners to have better reading habits, making it a popular choice for many.

On the other hand, online education faces many challenges. During the COVID-19 pandemic, governments implemented learning programs through online platforms, TV, radio, and other technologies to keep education accessible. However, many students missed these opportunities due to a lack of access to digital technology. Currently, children in conflict areas are also missing out on learning opportunities. Additionally, some underdeveloped countries overlook online education as they focus on addressing poverty-related issues.

Whatever it may be, regardless of the challenges, technology plays a crucial role in the education sector during this period of technological advancement. Despite the obstacles, online education helps improve learning outcomes for children. It creates opportunities for an inclusive learning environment, allowing those affected by conflicts or emergencies to access education. Therefore, online education will be essential across the world for those seeking to acquire knowledge.

THE Ministry of Health, Myanmar, laid down two objectives: to enable every citizen to attain full life expectancy and enjoy longevity of life and to ensure that every citizen is free from diseases.

The ways forward for the Department of Medical Services are retention of human capital in an all-inclusive approach, enhancing individual performance by time motion analysis, proper logistics and administrative support and enhancing the performance of the hospital by result-based management, patient safety and just-in-time response.

Importance of teamwork and communication skills with patients and families to improve safety in public hospitals

Teamwork and communication are essential for promoting teams that develop shared understanding, anticipate needs and problems, and apply standard tools for managing communication and conflict. In such doing, the following must be considered to improve safety in public hospitals: -

- Enhanced Patient Safety: Effective communication and teamwork among healthcare providers reduce the potential for errors, which can significantly improve patient safety. When all team members are on the same page, the likelihood of mistakes decreases.

- Improved Patient Outcomes: Collaborative efforts ensure that patients receive comprehensive care. That means better diagnosis, treatment plans, and follow-up care, leading to improved health outcomes.

- Increased Patient Satisfaction: When healthcare providers communicate clearly and work together efficiently, patients and their families feel more involved and informed about their care. That leads to higher satisfaction levels.

- Prevention of Medical Errors: Miscommunication is a common cause of medical errors. By fostering a culture of open communication and teamwork, hospitals can pre- vent many of these errors.

- Efficient Care Delivery: Teamwork and effective communication streamline processes, making the delivery of care more efficient. That can lead to shorter hospital stays and better resource utilization.

- Engagement of Patients and Families: Engaging patients and their families in the care process through clear communication helps them understand their treatment plans and what to expect. This involvement is linked to fewer adverse events and better overall care.

Simply treating colleagues and patients with respect – talking with them and listening to what they have to say with an open mind – is the first step towards effective communication and teamwork. Structured communication makes interactions with patients more effective and efficient, and it does the same thing for interactions among colleagues.

A critical communication tool that can help during briefings and debriefings is called “Situation-Background-Assessment-Recommendation” (SBAR). The SBAR technique provides a framework for communication between members of the healthcare team about a patient's condition.

The Silent Debt of A Daughter's Heart

By Min Zan

DEBT is a shadow that looms over the lives of many, creating fear, anxiety, and a relentless sense of obligation. It's a concept most of us dread, an invisible chain that binds us to responsibilities and expectations. Yet, not all debts are monetary. Some are carved in the depths of our hearts, debts that can never be fully repaid. One such debt is the debt of gratitude to a parent – something far more profound than financial obligations. This is the kind of debt that I carry deep within me, especially towards my mother, whose silent sacrifices continue to shape my life. In a world where financial debt can ruin lives, the emotional debt I owe my mother weighs heavier than anything else.

Debt, in its traditional sense, refers to owing money to someone. It is the position of being bound by a financial obligation. I fear this form of debt intensely. The thought of owing money or being involved in any financial transaction where I am both debtor and creditor terrifies me. I avoid borrowing and lending alike, refusing to let myself fall into the spiral that debt brings. If, by any unfortunate circumstance, I end up in debt, I make sure to repay it immediately, restoring my sense of peace. Yet, in following this habit so strictly, I have sometimes lost money to friends who never returned it. It is a price I am willing to pay to stay debt-free.

But life, as we know it, isn't that simple. No matter how much I try to live without debt, I find myself entrenched in a different kind – an emotional one. My parents, particularly my mother, have been the pillars that made me who I am today. I owe a debt of gratitude to them, a debt that no amount of money can settle. Unlike financial obligations, this is a burden I carry willingly, even joyfully. It's a debt that I know I can never fully repay, but I am committed to doing everything in my power to honour it.

The weight of this debt became heavier after my father's passing. During my university years, my dad suddenly passed away, leaving a void in my life that felt like rowing a boat without oars. My journey in life seemed to halt, adrift in uncertainty. But my mother, in her quiet resilience, became the substitute for those broken oars. She guided me with her strength, ensuring that I reached the shore of my educational dreams. While my heart ached from loss, my mother's unwavering support became the lifeline that carried me forward. Now, as I navigate the complexities of adulthood, my mother continues to shoulder her responsibilities, especially in supporting my younger sister's education. With my role as a government staff member keeping me away from home, my mother remains at the forefront, battling against the trials of the world. She gives so selflessly, asking for nothing in return, yet I can feel the weight of her sacrifices.

As a young woman myself, I yearn to experience the fullness of life – love, companionship, and the thrill of pursuing my passions in literature and art. I dream of one day standing by my sweetheart's side, basking in happiness, hand in hand. But every time I imagine such a future, the debt I owe my mother surfaces. It tugs at my heart, reminding me that before I chase my own happiness, I must first repay the immeasurable debt of love and sacrifice that she has bestowed upon me. Love, in its purest form, maybe the sweetest joy, but in my life, it stands in the shadow of the debt I owe my mother. A mother's love is the purest form of unconditional care. From the moment a child is born, a mother dedicates her time, energy, and heart to ensure that her child grows in comfort, safety, and happiness.

She is the one who stays awake during sleepless nights, worrying about her child's future, sacrificing her own needs for the wellbeing of the one she loves most. This level of devotion is not something that can ever be repaid with material things. A mother does not count her sacrifices, nor does she expect anything in return. But for every child, these unspoken acts of love create a debt, one that is not measured in money but in gratitude and respect. It's a debt that grows with every kind gesture, every meal prepared, every word of encouragement spoken when the world seems too harsh to face.

A mother's love is more than just providing physical care; it is the emotional and mental foundation of a child's life. She is the first person a child turns to in times of fear or uncertainty, and she is the one who holds the pieces of a child's shattered dreams and helps them rebuild. A mother's love means guiding her child through the complexities of life, often at the expense of her own dreams and desires.

Counter-argument to false information

False reports circulating on flood relief efforts in Loikaw

MALICIOUS news outlets have been spreading false reports claiming that flood relief supplies in Loikaw, Kayah State, are being withheld. According to local officials, these reports are entirely baseless.

The flood relief operations in Loikaw are being carried out in an organized manner by responsible authorities, who are working closely with relevant officials, and civil society organizations.

Donated relief supplies are being delivered to flood victims in need through various methods, and any claims of mismanagement or withholding of aid are unfounded. Officials stressed that these false reports appear to be deliberately designed to mislead the public and distort the ongoing relief efforts. Local authorities confirm that relief work is proceeding smoothly and remains focused on supporting those affected by the floods. — MNA/KZL

The Silent Debt of A Daughter's Heart

She makes countless sacrifices, not because she is asked to, but because her love drives her to do so. This love cannot be measured or repaid, creating an invisible debt that every child carries. It is a debt of the heart, one that makes children realize that no matter how much they give back, they will never be able to match the boundless love they have received.

For every child, the realization of this debt becomes clearer as they grow older. As children, we take our mother's love for granted, assuming it will always be there, assuming that it's natural for someone to give so much without expecting anything in return. But as we mature, we begin to understand the weight of what our mothers have done for us. We see the years of effort, the quiet sacrifices, and the countless moments when she put our needs before her own. That creates a debt that is far deeper than any financial obligation – it's a debt rooted in love, one that compels us to give back in whatever way we can, even though we know we can never fully repay it.

It's an emotional struggle, knowing that I may never be able to fully repay my mother for all that she has done for me. No matter how hard I try, no amount of success, money, or even love can match the endless hours of care, the sleepless nights, or the sacrifices she has made to ensure my future. And yet, I am determined.

I know that no material thing can balance the scale, but I can give her the one thing that is entirely mine – my heart. My mother may never ask for anything in return, but I know deep inside that the least I can do is love her back with all the depth of my soul. I have nothing more to give than that, and I hope it will be enough.

If my mother knows how much I agonized over this debt and how long I long to repay her for all that she has done, I wonder what she would say. Would she tell me that my love is enough? Would she laugh off my concerns and assure me that I owe her nothing?

Perhaps she would. But that doesn't change the truth – that I cannot rest until I have given back as much as I can. My heart, torn between love and obligation, will never stop striving to repay the unpayable. And though the weight of this debt may follow me for the rest of my life, it is a burden I will carry proudly, for it is the debt of love, sacrifice, and a mother's unyielding grace. If Mom knows it... she may not ask for anything in return, but I will still give her everything I have.

Lady Gaga plants lipstick smile on 'Mona Lisa' in Louvre clip

LADY Gaga comes face to face with the "Mona Lisa" in the Louvre and plants a lipstick smile on her face in a new video clip released Wednesday by the singer and the French museum.

The American diva who stars in the new "Joker" movie, channelled her Harley Quinn character to do a little bit of lipstick "vandalism" to Leonardo da Vinci's masterpiece to promote the Louvre's new exhibition, "Figures of the Fool", which like the movie, opens next month.

Lady Gaga creeps through the Paris museum at night in a red wig singing a song composed specially for the video, which was released on her Instagram and TikTok accounts.

She ends up nose-to-nose with the Mona Lisa before painting a clownish smile in lipstick on the protective glass in front of it. As she stands back, a black mascara tear drops from the star's eye.

At Paris Fashion Week, Maria Grazia Chiuri showcased Dior's sporty collection, featuring bomber jackets and parachute trousers with intricate zips and straps, highlighting craftsmanship. Evening dresses honoured Greek warrior Amazons, complemented by flat boots.

Simultaneously, Anthony Vaccarello's Saint Laurent presentation embraced 1980s style with oversized menswear-inspired outfits, drawing a glamorous crowd, including celebrities like Gwyneth Paltrow and Kate Moss. — AFP

DIOR gave Paris Fashion Week a shot of Olympic adrenaline on Tuesday with a troop of athletic Amazons striding down its runway amid whizzing arrows.

Not for the first time, Italian designer Maria Grazia

Chiuri dipped into her feminist quiver to deliver modern, technological looks for strong women taking on the world.

Almost entirely in black and white, her spring-summer collection was inspired by the Amazon dress created by the fabled French brand's founder, Christian Dior, in 1951.

To hammer the mythological point home, Chiuri had the London-based Neapolitan artist SAGG Napoli — an archer — fire off arrow after arrow at a target in the middle of the runway as her models marched steelily down either side.

A plexiglass screen ensured no one was skewered but still the heartbeat quickened, helped on by thundering Italian techno.

Chiuri, who loves to use stirring quotes on her creations, cited her fellow Italian after a summer of Olympic and Paralympic triumphs in the French capital: "May the building of a strong mind and a strong body be the greatest work I have ever made." — AFP

Multiple arrests after US woman uses machine-assisted suicide

SWISS police said Tuesday they arrested several people after a US woman used a controversial suicide pod to end her life.

The Sarco capsule, designed for assisted dying by replacing oxygen with nitrogen to induce hypoxia, was reportedly used in Switzerland, raising significant legal and ethical issues. Although assisted dying is legal, active euthanasia remains banned. Swiss Interior Minister Elisabeth Baume-Schneider declared the use of the Sarco "not legal", leading to multiple arrests related to the incident. The Last Resort organization introduced the Sarco, claiming it provides a "peaceful, fast, dignified" death. The first reported use involved a 64-year-old woman from the US, suffering from severe health issues, who died under a forest canopy with only one other person present. Invented by Philip Nitschke, the 3D-printable Sarco costs about 15,000 euros, following extensive development. — AFP

Cryptocurrency platform boss urges tighter regulation

THE co-founder of one of the world's most popular cryptocurrencies called for tighter regulation of the sector to guard against the fraud and wild swings that have dogged it, in an interview with AFP.

Jeremy Allaire of Circle recounted the US firm's decision to offer a stabilized cryptocurrency — and insisted crypto operators owed it to society to submit to safeguards just as other emerging sectors such as AI must. "We have social objectives that we have to match against the technology," Allaire said during a visit this week to Circle's European headquarters in Paris.

Circle offers a USDC "stablecoin", pegged to the dollar, as well as a euro-pegged variant, EURC.

Currently, $35.5 billion worth of USDC are in circulation. As with other cryptocurrencies, transactions are recorded on a decentralized ledger, the blockchain, and not by a bank as is the case with traditional currencies. However, whereas the dollar value of cryptocurrencies such as bitcoin tends to fluctuate, often wildly, the creators of stablecoins actively target a stable value.

In a world propelled by technological development, Allaire said, safeguards are vital for such activities.

Cryptocurrencies have made headlines since their creation, from their extreme volatility to the collapse of several industry giants, foremost among them the FTX exchange platform. — AFP

New York area port prepares for possible US strike disruption

NEW York area shipping officials urged customers to immediately retrieve their cargo ahead of a possible strike next week which would impact major US ports, according to a letter released Tuesday.

Tens of thousands of port workers stand poised to walk off the job in a stoppage that would also affect myriad other industries from trucking to retail to rail just weeks before the 2024 presidential election.

In a letter to customers and partners, Bethann Rooney, port director for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, said users should pick up their import cargo before the 30 September expiration of a contract affecting ports in the Eastern and Gulf Coasts.

"Although we remain hopeful that an agreement will be reached ... preparations are underway for a potential strike effective 12 am Tuesday, 1 October," Rooney said.

She told customers that "there will be no opportunities to deliver any cargo once a strike begins."

Importers and logistics companies in recent days have warned of economic hardship from the possible stoppage, which appears more likely amid the lack of meaningful negotiations in recent weeks between the International Longshoremen's Association (ILA) and the United States Maritime Alliance (USMX).

VW workers reject planned closures, layoffs

VOLKSWAGEN workers protest against plant closures and compulsory redundancies ahead of talks between the carmaker and the industrial union, IG Metall.

Unions on Wednesday criticized Volkswagen for failing to make specific proposals in the first round of talks over the German auto giant's drastic cost-cutting plan, as thousands of workers picketed the meeting.

The discussion with management was "disappointing, even sobering", Thorsten Groeger, lead negotiator for the IG Metall union, told reporters in Hanover.

Volkswagen "did not concretize its proposal and did not sketch out a concept for the future" in the opening talks, Groeger said. "Plant closures and mass layoffs remain on the table," Groeger said. — AFP

Mexico excludes Spanish king from president's swearing-in

Sheinbaum complained that King Felipe had not replied to a letter about the colonial past. PHOTO: AFP

Sheinbaum barred King Felipe VI from her swearing-in ceremony, citing the monarchy's failure to acknowledge the harm caused by Spain's conquest of Mexico.

MEXICO'S president-elect, Claudia Sheinbaum, sparked diplomatic tensions with Spain by excluding King Felipe VI from her upcoming inauguration, criticizing the monarchy for failing to acknowledge the harms caused by Spain's conquest of Mexico, leading Spain to boycott the event in protest.

Mexican president-elect Claudia Sheinbaum angered Spain on Wednesday by barring its King Felipe VI from her swearing-in ceremony, accusing him of failing to acknowledge harm caused by his country's conquest of Mexico five centuries ago.

The decision prompted Spain to boycott the event altogether, with its Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez calling the Mexican decision "inexplicable" and "totally unacceptable".

Mexico's outgoing President Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador in 2019 sent a letter to the king asking that he "publicly and officially" acknowledge the "damage" caused by the 1519-1521 conquest, which resulted in the death of a large part of the country's pre-Hispanic population.

"Unfortunately, this letter was never replied to directly, as should have been the best practice in bilateral relations," Sheinbaum said in a statement.

Mexico had in July invited just Sanchez to the swearing-in ceremony on 1 October, the statement added. — AFP

NEWS IN BRIEF

Russia to continue cooperation with UN to ensure global food security

RUSSIA will continue cooperation with the United Nations (UN) to ensure access to Russian food products on global markets, Russian Deputy Foreign Minister Sergey Vershinin said on Wednesday.

Speaking to RIA Novosti, a Russian news agency, on the sidelines of the UN General Assembly High-Level Week 2024 in New York, Vershinin reaffirmed Moscow's commitment to global food security, particularly for developing countries in Asia, Africa, and Latin America.

As a key player in ensuring global food security, Russia will continue its dialogue with the UN on this issue, said Vershinin. However, he noted that the collaboration between Russia and the UN over the past two years has not yielded significant results.

"Regrettably, we have to acknowledge that despite two years of joint efforts, no meaningful progress has been achieved," he said. — Xinhua

UK's Starmer aims to 'reset' relationship with EU

PRIME Minister Keir Starmer has said that he will meet EU chief Ursula von der Leyen in Brussels next week as part of his plans to "reset" UK relations with the EU after Brexit.

The UK's departure from the European Union after five decades of membership in 2020 has had an effect on trade and security cooperation, prompting calls for a rethink on future ties.

Late on Wednesday, Starmer – in New York for the UN General Assembly – posted a photo of himself and von der Leyen.

"I want to reset our relationship with the EU and make Brexit work for the British people," he wrote on X, adding that he was "looking forward" to starting discussions with von der Leyen. — AFP

Restarting nuclear power plants: The unprecedented gamble in the US

TWO American energy companies are each preparing to bring a nuclear power station back into service, an unprecedented operation which should help meet the growing need for electricity in the United States.

With demand for nuclear energy rising in the wake of Russia's invasion of Ukraine and the US government eager to transition to carbon-free resources, the calculus has changed on the shuttered nuclear plants.

On Friday, Constellation Energy unveiled plans to restart a reactor at Pennsylvania's Three Mile Island, which was closed for economic rea-

Israel may send ground troops against Hezbollah

ISRAEL'S army chief told soldiers on Wednesday to prepare for a possible ground offensive against Hezbollah in Lebanon as US President Joe Biden warned against "all-out war" in the Middle East.

"We are attacking all day, both to prepare the ground for the possibility of your entry, but also to continue striking Hezbollah," Lieutenant General Herzl Halevi told a tank brigade, a statement from the military said as Israeli warplanes conducted hundreds of deadly strikes around Lebanon.

Lewandowski goal maintains Barcelona's 100% start to La Liga season

FC Barcelona continued their 100 per cent start to the season in La Liga on Wednesday with a 1-0 win at home to Getafe, who remain in the bottom three and without a win. Inaki Pena made his first appearance of the season in the Barcelona goal after Marc-Andre ter Stegen's knee injury at the weekend, but had little work to do against a rival that created little danger until the last minute of the game.

Robert Lewandowski put Barca ahead after 19 minutes when he hooked home a loose ball after Getafe goalkeeper David Soria made a mess of a Jules Kounde cross from the right.

The second half continued with Barcelona in control, with Lamine Yamal hitting the bar with a left-foot shot and Raphinha drawing an excellent save from Soria.

It was only in the closing minutes of the game that Getafe created any real clear chances, but in the 95th minute Borja Mayoral missed from around eight yards out with only Pena to beat after a low cross from the right.

It was a huge let-off for Barca, whose next game is away to Osasuna on Saturday night. In Thursday's first game, Rayo Vallecano held Girona to a 0-0 draw in Girona's Montilivi Stadium.

Girona pressed hard for a winner, especially in the second half, but failed to hit the target, although they were unlucky to see Yaser Asprilla hit the crossbar with a powerful shot from outside the penalty area. — Xinhua

Arsenal, Liverpool advance to Carabao Cup fourth round

Liverpool and Arsenal have both secured comfortable wins in their recent League Cup matches. Liverpool thrashed West Ham 5-1, while Arsenal crushed Bolton Wanderers 5-1 in the third round of the League Cup. PHOTO: AFP

RAHEEM Sterling scored his first Arsenal goal and Jack Porter became the club's youngest ever starter in a 5-1 rout of Bolton in the League Cup on Wednesday, while Liverpool reached the last 16 with a 5-1 win against troubled West Ham.

Sterling marked his maiden Arsenal start following his transfer deadline day move from Chelsea with a second-half strike in the third-round tie at the Emirates Stadium.

The 29-year-old will hope his goal marks the start of a career revival after a disappointing two-year spell at Chelsea.

Gunners boss Mikel Arteta had made seven changes from Sunday's stormy 2-2 draw at Premier League champions Manchester City, including giving goalkeeper Porter his record-breaking debut in place of the injured David Raya.

Aged 16 years and 72 days old, Porter was the youngest player ever to start for Arsenal, surpassing the previous record holder Cesc Fàbregas – who was 16 years and 177 days when he played against Rotherham in 2003.

Porter was Arsenal's second youngest ever player overall after Ethan Nwaneri, who was 15 years and 181 days, when he made his debut in 2022.

Declan Rice put Arsenal ahead in north London after 16 minutes with a clinical finish from the edge of the area for his first goal this season. Arsenal will next face EFL Championship side Preston in the fourth round. — AFP

Fritz loses on day of shocks at Japan Open

US Open finalist Taylor Fritz crashed out of the Japan Open in the first round on Thursday and Frances Tiafoe and Stefanos Tsitsipas joined him on a day of shocks in Tokyo.

Top seed Fritz, who this month became the first American man to reach a Grand Slam final since 2009, was bundled out 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 by France's Arthur Fils.

It came just hours after number seven seed Tiafoe, who lost to Fritz in the US Open semi-finals, was eliminated with a 7-5, 6-3 loss to fellow American Brandon Nakashima.

Greece's Tsitsipas, the number four seed, went out with a 4-6, 6-1, 6-2 defeat to American qualifier Alex Michelsen.

World number seven Fritz won the Japan Open title in 2022 but met his match in the energetic 20-year-old Fils.

Fritz needed a medical time-out to deal with a back issue during the second set.

He could not recover as world number 24 Fils closed out the match in just over two hours to set up a second-round match with Italy's Matteo Berrettini.

Kremlin: Russia's nuclear doctrine update sends clear warning to West

THE recently announced changes to Russia's nuclear doctrine should be taken as a certain signal to unfriendly countries, Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov said on Thursday.

During the Russian Security Council's permanent meeting on Wednesday, Russian President Vladimir Putin proposed to discuss a review of the foundational principles guiding Russia's nuclear deterrence policy. He stressed that Moscow reserves the right to use nuclear weapons in response to acts of aggression, particularly if the adversary poses a significant threat to Russia, even if that threat is presented through conventional weaponry.

"This should be considered as a certain signal," Peskov told reporters, adding that the amendments to the document have been formulated and a decision on the subsequent publication will be made later.

Russia's updated nuclear doctrine sends a warning signal to the West about the consequences of an attack, not necessarily by nuclear means, the official said.

"In fact, the whole world knows well, its sensible people know well about our nuclear potential and its deterrent role. Of course, nuclear deterrence is being adjusted taking into account those elements of tension that are developing along the perimeter of our borders," Peskov said, adding that sensible heads of state, sensible politicians, analysts perfectly understand and understood the seriousness of Putin's statements. — SPUTNIK

Recycled water becomes Beijing's stable second water source

WATER reclaimed from treated residential sewage and collected rainwater has become the second most important urban water supply source for the Chinese capital of Beijing, according to the municipal water authority.

In the year 2023, the city recycled 1.28 billion cubic metres of water, of which 1.18 billion cubic metres was used for ecological and environmental purposes to replenish the city's natural water resources, according to the department's data. "The amount of recycled water accounted for nearly 30 per cent of the city's total water consumption last year, a record high, making it the stable second water source in Beijing," said Fu Chaochen, Beijing Water Authority director of sewage treatment and reclaimed water management.

Since the beginning of 2023, Beijing has extended its sewage collection pipe network by 729 kilometres and renovated 50 kilometres long rainwater drainage pipelines. The city's sewage treatment capacity has reached 7.85 million cubic metres per day, said Fu.

Six water recycling plants are currently under construction in Beijing. Meanwhile, the water authority has launched a massive cleaning work of rainwater drainage ditches and outlets for better rainwater collection. — Xinhua

State of emergency declared amid Quito wildfire

A state of emergency was declared on Wednesday in Ecuador's capital Quito as wildfires continue to devastate parts of the city, said Mayor Pabel Munoz.

The decision was made by Quito's Emergency Operations Committee after assessing damage from a massive fire in the Guapulo area in the eastern part of the city.

The fire, which began on Tuesday, has been the most destructive one the city has faced in recent years, scorching large swathes of vegetation, destroying six homes in central-northern Quito, and engulfing the city in thick smoke. "This declaration may help us secure at least half a million dollars from international cooperation agencies, which will be critical for the reconstruction and recovery of damaged ecosystems," Munoz said. — Xinhua
